

Bletsoe Castle: formal garden earthworks, 2000

These banks and ditches in the fields immediately north of Bletsoe Castle itself are the remains of formal gardens that were attached to the new mansion built in the 16th century. They formed part of what was recorded as 'Little Park' in the land survey of 1624, with the Great Park, of medieval origins, stretching beyond into the distance.

[David Baker]