

Croquet & Tennis in the Rectory Garden c1907
